METRIC 5.3 STUDENT ACCESS MEASURES

Indicator 5.3.1 Tracking Access Measures

Davao Oriental State University (DOrSU) practices the systematic collection and maintenance of sex-disaggregated data of students enrolled across all year levels to monitor and track the number of female and male students within the University. This practice enables the institution to generate relevant statistical information on student enrollment and provides a basis for analyzing student population trends, promoting gender-responsive planning, and supporting the implementation of Gender and Development (GAD) initiatives.

As reflected in the University's sample Student Profile Information, applicants are required to indicate their sex as part of the admission application process. This information is collected and recorded to ensure that student demographic profiles are properly documented and can be used for institutional reporting and analysis.

Furthermore, the University Registrar maintains official records of enrolled students with data disaggregated by sex. These records provide the University with an accessible and reliable source of information on the number of female and male students enrolled across different academic programs and year levels. The sex-disaggregated enrollment data are also made available upon request by students and University employees, subject to applicable data privacy policies and institutional procedures.

In addition, the total number of students enrolled at DOrSU for every academic year, disaggregated by sex, is reflected and made publicly accessible through the University's official website. This allows stakeholders, including students, employees, and the general public, to access relevant enrollment statistics, thereby promoting transparency and providing an overview of the University's student population.
